MATRIX OF LIBERTY

In a small residential area in Plymouth Massachusetts lies one of the most important monuments to liberty that you have never heard of. The National Monument to the Forefathers was conceived in 1820, but it was not completed until 1888.

The monument describes all the key foundations necessary for a Nation that supports true liberty. The key statue of faith is supported by the figures of morality, law, education, and liberty. All are necessary in order to create and maintain a free society.

PILGRIM

I remember learning in school about the Pilgrims and their journey to America aboard the Mayflower. The teacher explained that the Pilgrims had a tough first winter, had funny looking clothes, and that the Indians saved them, so they had a feast. This is, of course, a brief synopsis, but basically covers what is taught.

Imagine my dismay when I investigated the founding principles of this nation and discovered a history about the Pilgrim that is not taught. It is critical to understanding the Pilgrims because they are our original Founders. Their ideology critically influenced the early colonists and who we became as a people. Their trials tell a tale that we should all heed about when despots come to power and what they do to those who resist tyranny.

The Pilgrims were a group of Protestants persecuted for their belief that Christ was the head of the Church and not the King. They were referred to in England as Puritans. They printed Bibles in English to promote the availability of the gospel to the common man instead of hearing it from priests that handed down the King's theology. Pilgrims believed in a covenant relationship with God instead of a covenant relationship with the King. They believed that the King had hijacked the Protestant Reformation and had not reformed the church enough for his own political motivations. Pilgrim beliefs centered on a church that was closer to what the Bible taught and not what the Roman Catholic church had instituted.

The Puritans were fined for refusing to attend their parish churches, opting for their own service. This caused them to move to the Netherlands to avoid persecution in England. The Dutch allowed the Puritans to practice their religion and generally gave them their own space. Puritans established a printing press and started to produce Bibles again in English.

The leader of the Puritan congregation was Pastor John Robinson. He had grown his followers to a thriving population of 400 after they had settled in Leiden. While in Holland, Robinson earned the calling of Pastor to the Pilgrim fathers. He would always stay behind with the weaker members of his congregation once it had migrated.

He did this in England and again when the Pilgrims migrated on the Mayflower and Speedwell to Plymouth, Massachusetts. It was his intent to go to America with the second wave of Puritans, but he died before he got the chance.

The Mayflower and the Speedwell sailed together and were the first two ships that set out to make the voyage for the Puritans. The Speedwell was to be the designated ship that would stay behind and supply the Pilgrims through the winter as they set out in September and would not have an opportunity to plant crops until spring. The ship proved unseaworthy and after developing a leak, it had to be abandoned along with a significant amount of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, England.

Pastor Robinson sent a farewell letter to the Pilgrims that helped inspire them along the way. The Pilgrims Charter, to settle America, had been invalidated before they sailed, but they risked the trip anyway. Essentially, they were America's first illegal refugees. That status, however, was short lived. The returning Mayflower carried with it their new application to the King for a charter, which was granted.

When the Mayflower arrived, there were ninety-eight Pilgrims. Four of the original settlers had already died on the voyage. The men on the ship, excluding servants and crew, signed what is referred to as the Mayflower Compact, which was their first governing document.

IN THE NAME OF GOD, AMEN.
We, whose names are underwritten, the Loyal Subjects of our dread Sovereign Lord King James, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. Having undertaken for the Glory of God, and Advancement of the Christian Faith, and the Honour of our King and Country, a Voyage to plant the first Colony in the northern Parts of Virginia; Do by these Presents, solemnly and mutually, in the Presence of God and one another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil Body Politick, for our better Ordering and Preservation, and Furtherance of the Ends aforesaid: And by Virtue hereof do enact, constitute, and frame, such just and equal Laws, Ordinances, Acts, Constitutions, and Officers, from time to time, as shall be thought most meet and convenient for the general Good of the Colony; unto which we promise all due Submission and Obedience.

IN WITNESS whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names at Cape-Cod the eleventh of November, in the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King James, of England, France, and Ireland, the eighteenth, and of Scotland the fifty-fourth, Anno Domini; 1620.

The Pilgrims were woefully unprepared for the New England winter that they landed in. They had insufficient provisions, clothing, and no houses. Initially the women and children slept on the Mayflower as the men hastily constructed dwellings. The Captain was convinced to stay on until spring. This was fortunate as their first dwelling burned to the ground in January of 1621. A sickness swept through the New Plymouth Colony, leaving only seven members were left to tend to the sick. The epidemic decimated the colony. Forty-six pilgrims and twenty-five crew would die before they would make it to summer. Only five women survived the winter in what would be called the “Starving Time”.

I could spend time reflecting on the hardships of our Forefathers, but for the sake of brevity I will conclude speaking about their challenges. The Pilgrims held their allegiance to God as a pinnacle of their faith. That faith carried them through impossible times. They were persecuted for it and driven from place to place for it. Ultimately, they found a home because of it, and this Nation was founded on it.

For those who state that Christian faith was inconsequential to the founding of our Nation, they have not studied history. Our Country was founded because of it and all that followed owe a debt of gratitude to those who risked all for the freedom to worship how, when, and where they want.

CODE OF THE WEST

In Ferry County Washington, on April 16th, 2012, the County Commissioners adopted the “Code of the West”. This document is based on similar documents from other rural counties throughout the United States.

It states in part, “The Code of the West was first chronicled by the famous western writer, Zane Grey. The men and women who came to this part of the country during the westward expansion of the United States were bound by an unwritten code of conduct. The values of integrity and self-reliance guided their decisions, actions and interactions. In keeping with that spirit, we offer this information to help citizens of Ferry County who wish to follow in the footsteps of those rugged individualists by living outside city and town limits.”

The document goes on for twelve pages to describe that life here is much like it has been since the founding in the frontier days. Emergency services do not extend to many areas. If your road is not paved it most likely will not get paved. Many roads are the responsibility of groups or individual owners to maintain, etc.

The document was written as an advisory statement to notify people on how rugged life is out here and things people should consider before moving to Ferry County. However, many people who move here have not read the document and often complain that their cell phones do not work outside of town. They gripe about how the county does not plow the roads and they complain how they must plan a day trip to go purchase affordable groceries.

I only mention this to point out how we have lost something as a society. People who have lived in an urban area their whole lives have an expectation of ease and efficiency. Everything that a person could possibly want is within a short drive in the city. Rules are everywhere that govern hundreds of thousands and even millions of people who are at times literally stacked on top of each other.

People from an urban environment often embrace a philosophy that rules on top of rules are the only way to maintain order. As their urban population has grown in this country, they have imposed their will upon rural areas where the dominant philosophy is something different. A rural dweller believes that freedom is the ultimate state of life and that rules imposed from urban centers make no sense to those of us who are faced with the reality of bears, cougars, and wolves.

When this country was a functioning Republic, balance between urban and rural areas was maintained. Rural land produced food for the cities, which produced goods for the rural dwellers. People celebrated their differences and policies were developed out of compromise. Those who desired freedom and hard work, migrated to open country. Those who desired convenience, structure, and rules, migrated to the city.

But a strange thing happened over the last one hundred years. People in the city started thinking that they were better than the people in the country. They took on the supremacist attitude that they knew better how to manage rural affairs. This Republic started to be referred to as a Democracy.

True history stopped being taught, replaced by abbreviated summaries that left out the lessons of the past. The first publication of the U.S. Congress was the Bible. Our Founders knew that the only way that our country would survive as a Republic was if the country had a strong moral foundation. Once it was driven out of schools and the halls of government, the Republic would not function as designed.

People had to have the desire to do the right thing for our country to function. Just like the Code of The West, a people had to have integrity and honor for everything to run correctly. To be a neighbor out here you must be a good neighbor. You need to respect your neighbor's rights if you expect to have your rights respected. It is a symbiotic relationship. Sure, there is the occasional outlier who is not neighborly, but those people are often taken care of by time and the elements. People need other people from time to time out here. Without it, survival is far more difficult.

This year we had quite a few people move into the county from urban areas. The dynamic of the county has shifted a bit. There are more people that fly down the road at excessive speeds in vehicles that are not quite suited for life out here. There have been a few more unfriendly folks here than normal and the complaints about what the lack of services have gone up.

I hope the city wears off soon. It does, if a person makes it out here long enough. The isolation is often hard for people who come from the city. Additional isolation comes from trying to change the area into the place that they left. Often many people are driven back to the cities by their own mentality. I remember how difficult it is to cast off the city.

I find that the most well-rounded individuals out here are those who have lived in both places and find a balance between the values of urban and city life. They seem to be more resilient and flexible when unforeseen circumstances arrive. Sure, lifelong residents know all the tricks to stay alive and often can hunker down for a winter and not go shopping for months without batting an eye. But those with dual skill sets eventually learn the resiliency of the highlands and use the ingenuity of the cities to create new and efficient ways of getting things done.

I certainly welcome all newcomers who want to experience the freedom of the Code of The West. I am glad to have some of them as my friends. It reminds me what is possible when people drop a rigid mentality and adopt the “Think outside of the box” mantra. Perhaps in time there will be enough of us who want to work together to make a difference in this crazy mixed up world.

Full disclosure, I was born in the country. My father was a Quarter horse and Appaloosa breeder, as well as a general contractor. I lived in the city quite a while after I got out of the Army. I returned to my roots in the country to reclaim a quality of life and independence that exists nowhere else.

DUTY

I have often wondered how many people are left in the world who have a sense of duty. Most probably do not even know what the word means, let alone incorporate it into their personal code of conduct.

Duty is a sense of expectation. It is a moral obligation to do something. The obligation is not merely a recommendation, it is a requirement to achieve something. Take chastity for example. If one desires to remain chaste then their words and actions need to reflect that. Continually dressing in a certain way and acting in a certain way will attract the attention of individuals who have no interest in chastity and ultimately chastity itself becomes threatened either by force, seduction, or willing participation. It can be said that if one desires to remain chaste then they have a duty to dress and act a certain way to have the best chance to maintain chastity.

Liberty is a similar moral absolute which has a corresponding duty. A person's actions and the words that they say determines whether one is a Patriot for Liberty or a promoter of bondage. A free individual is often referred to as a rebel to society as they insist upon free will. Society often demands conformity which is contrary to freedom. Standing up for unalienable rights is necessary in order to be able to exercise those rights.

When duty is abandoned, the moral absolute which is protected by the action that results from duty is overcome by the corresponding amoral absolute. When referencing liberty, the duty is to defend it, or slavery will be instituted. Regarding our constitution, one has a duty to enforce it or people have no obligation to abide by it. If we speak of the sanctity of the vote, a citizen has a duty to protect the purity of the vote or the action of casting a vote becomes diluted and eventually meaningless.

Our society has become one that is so passive that government is able to violate the tenets that it is required to operate under. People have willfully handed over their trust to elected and non-elected officials. These individuals continue to violate that trust without consequence. Judges, politicians, and government employees have a financial incentive to do nothing to address the corruption that has consumed our country on all levels.

When the moral compass of a society is degraded then duty fades away until it disappears almost entirely. Not only is liberty abandoned, but so is other morally important traits. Chastity, kindness, understanding, mercy, humility, and love are but a few of these qualities.

It is easy to see that when duty is abandoned, the ties that bind a society together start to fray. Ultimately this leads to societal collapse. This process starts off slowly, as one morally important standard is relaxed, followed by the adjustment of society. Those who have the sense of duty to defend that standard are ridiculed for their stand. This public shaming causes others who might stand for something else to become passive, especially when duty is ridiculed instead of celebrated.

Over time more pillars of society are taken down. This cycle perpetuates until the citizens live in fear of conforming to values, they do not believe in. I believe that we are at such a point in our history where we are in danger of losing everything that we once were as a society.

Duty cannot be mandated. A mandate is bondage and anti-liberty in its nature. To understand what true duty is, it is important to investigate our past to see examples of it. I hope that by looking at them, we can be inspired to be better Americans and live up to the expectations of our ancestors instead of embracing irresponsible hedonism.

During colonial times, no word brought more fear into the hearts of the populace than, "Smallpox". This terrible virus killed thirty percent of those who were infected with it. An outbreak would happen in an area and would decimate the populace until herd immunity was accomplished. It would not return until a significant amount of the population became vulnerable again.

When the war broke out in 1775 against the British, General Washington recognized that the troops from England had developed herd immunity and that his army was at risk from the outbreaks that were happening in areas around the colonies. During the Revolution there was a pandemic sweeping through the colonies. Instead of stripping people of their freedoms, our ancestors chose to brave the risk and opted to fight for liberty.

While in winter quarters in 1777, patriots in the Continental Army willingly exposed themselves to the disease using a primitive process called variolation. This process involved making a small incision in the flesh and placing the puss from the sores of an infected individual into the incision. The hope was that the individual came down with smallpox and thus would be immune later.

Willingly infected soldiers had a fatality rate of between five and ten percent. Although this was lower than if they had caught it naturally, they still had to suffer from the disease for a month and had the potential to spread it to their families. Many people died during this process, but did so out of a sense of duty. This paid off in the end as the Continental Army was not decimated by the disease that was swept across the country.

Considering this. If we had the same sense of duty as our ancestors, we would have likely been out of our current state of medical tyranny. The healthy among us would have volunteered to be infected with COVID so that we could have quickly developed herd immunity and protected our most vulnerable population. Instead, governments mandated actions, have not stopped the spread of the disease and have caused the destruction of the economy as well. Duty must be voluntary, and it must be based on proven results.

Even before this act of bravery, the colonists already had a proven track record of duty. They resisted the Sugar Act, the Currency Act, The Stamp Act, and the Quartering Act, just to name a few. They had decades of defiance and resistance against tyranny. Their sense of duty is something we should all aspire to emulate.

There were more oppressive acts to follow, but the colonists knew that freedom required action. From the Boston Tea Party to the battles of Lexington, Concord, and beyond, our Founding Fathers exemplified duty. I pray we can all find in within ourselves to rediscover it.

REMEMBER THE LADIES

The Magna Carta, written in 1215, was the first written constitution in Europe. Did you know that one of its key tenants, due process, was written as the result of a woman?

Magna Carta clause 39: No man shall be taken, imprisoned, outlawed, banished or in any way destroyed, nor will we proceed against or prosecute him, except by the lawful judgement of his peers or by the law of the land.

Matilda de Braose, “Lady of Hay”, was the wife of a powerful baron and court favorite of King John of England. Beautiful, wise, and courageous, the locals saw her as a warrior in her own right. Her husband, William de Braose, put her in charge of Hay Castle and its surrounding territory. She was said to have built the castle herself in one night, carrying the stones in her apron. In 1198, Matilda held off a Welsh attack for three weeks until English reinforcements arrived, earning the castle its nickname “Matilda’s Castle”.

In 1207 Matilda and her husband had a falling out with King John. As a result, the king demanded her sons as hostages to ensure the family’s loyalty.

“I will not deliver my sons to your lord, King John, for he foully murdered his nephew Arthur, whom he should have cared for honourably.”

The king responded harshly to Matilde’s remarks, imprisoning her and her eldest son, demanding 40,000 marks for her freedom. Unable or unwilling to pay, Matilde’s husband fled to France, leaving her and her son incarcerated at Windsor Castle...only to eventually starve to death.

“On the eleventh day the mother was found dead between her son’s legs, still upright but leaning back against her son's chest as a dead woman. The son, who was also dead, sat upright, leaning against the wall as a dead man. So desperate was the mother that she had eaten her son's cheeks. When William de Braose, who was in Paris, heard this news, he died soon afterwards, many asserting that it was through grief.' - Anonymous of Bethune

Instead of subduing the barons, King John's treatment of Matilda helped fuel the baron's revolt and eventual writing of the Magna Carta, Clause 39.

THE MATRIX OF LIBERTY

In an unsuspecting suburb of Plymouth, Massachusetts, rests an eighty-one-foot monument carved out of a single massive section of granite. It is arguably the most important statue in our nation's history...and most people have never heard of it.

The massive monument was conceived in 1820 by those who still had the lessons of the Revolutionary War and the founding of our country fresh in their mind. But it was Charles Howland Hammatt Billings, an artist who was known for his illustrations in Uncle Tom's Cabin and his portrayal of the Battle of Lexington, who designed the structure. It was originally supposed to be one hundred and fifty feet tall and comparable to the Colossus of Rhodes, but Billings reduced the size shortly before his death.

The massive project was designed to illustrate all the crucial elements that are outlined in the Bible that are necessary to create and maintain a free society. The monument was built with the symbols that illustrate the complete make up of our nation and any free society. Each part is crucial to the foundation of the central figure.

The complete monument is referred to as a Matrix of Liberty. It is for all intent and purposes the blueprint of our nation.

FAITH

The largest and most important of the statues is Faith. She is what you notice first when you approach the statue. One of her hands is pointing towards heaven at the Creator of all things. The other hand is holding an open book, indicating that the instructions from above are written in a text that gives us detailed instructions on how to live our lives.

All nations have faith in something. Some place their faith in a man. Others have faith in various agreed upon sets of principles. The fabric of our free society is rooted in the faith in our God.

Faith cannot exist in perpetuity without the other allegorical figures of Morality, Law, Education, and Liberty. Each one of those supporting statues have additional principals that are essential for their support. The whole matrix depends on itself for self-sustainability.

MORALITY

No nation has endured for long without a concept of morality. I believe there were some Founding Fathers who had divine inspiration as to those things which could eventually bring this country down, Samuel Adams, was one of them. He stated that “While the people are virtuous, they cannot be subdued; but when once they lose their virtue, they will be ready to surrender their liberties to the first external or internal invader”.

The Morality statue has the Ten Commandments in her left hand and the scroll of Revelation in her right. One represents instructions from the past and the other represents instructions for the future. Understanding the lessons of the past are essential in helping us navigate the challenges in the past.

Our country was founded on the Christian concepts of morality. The Bible was the first book authorized by congress and it was published specifically to be put in schools so that our moral system could be taught. Fervent proselytizing was not the goal here and devout Christianity was not essential in everyone. All citizens had their free will, but it was important for them to understand the morality of the country that they lived in. The Founding Fathers believed that if we ever lost our morality the Republic would not stand. They feared that it would be replaced by a Democracy which was nothing other than mob rule.

The Prophet and the Evangelist are the reliefs that support morality. The Prophet is a crucial part of our morality. One should always turn to Divine inspiration to see the pitfalls that lie ahead. This is balanced with an Evangelist who is one who studies the written lessons of the past and professes their truths so that others can find the light of the word of God.

LAW

The Pilgrims understood that law and order was crucial to a successful society. They adopted their first laws, in what was known as the Mayflower Compact, right before they stepped off the Mayflower. From our first moments as a nation, laws have been what has held us together. Our Forefathers turned to Biblical truths to form laws of fairness and mutual respect. The Natural Law, or God's Law, was referenced in our Declaration of Independence.

Law is more than just a code of what a person cannot do. Law is and always must be a set of instructions that uphold total personal sovereignty while ensuring that the boundaries of that sovereignty are defined so another individual's sovereignty is not infringed on. Anything more than that inhibits the free will that our Creator gave to us at birth.

Law is flanked by the carved reliefs of Justice and Mercy. Without applying the moral principles of each, Law becomes either ineffective or too brutal.

EDUCATION

From the earliest moment in our nation, education was a prominent pillar. Our first English settlers who came over on the Mayflower were driven from their homes because they dared to print Bibles and make them available in English to all people. Prior to their brave endeavor only the church had access to Bibles, printed in Latin so the common man could not understand the words. This led to the church becoming a corrupt institution that created ordinances, rights, and procedures that were not in Holy Scripture.

The statue of education clearly represents the importance of passing on knowledge of the Bible as it is holding an open one. This shows from our early moments as a nation that the Bible should not only be accessible, but read by all in their early education and reviewed throughout life.

Our Forefathers knew that education had to be accessible to everyone, taught by the wisest men available and not by a state sanctioned entity. The statue is flanked by the reliefs representing youth and an old man representing wisdom. The young must be taught by the old and wise -not by those who have an agenda of indoctrination. It is only after years of the hard lessons of life can one fully appreciate and explain the simple and pure truths of the written word.

LIBERTY

Finally, we come to liberty. The statue of liberty is a fierce looking warrior that is holding a sword, ready to defend the principle of liberty. This clearly shows that liberty is not a passive thing, but one that requires vigilance to maintain. He gazes outward, watching for trouble that may approach as he wears a lion skin on his back. representing the tyranny of the British Crown that he has conquered.

The reliefs that flank liberty are Tyranny Overthrown and Peace. This represents that only by overthrowing tyranny can a people enjoy peace. The most oppressive tyranny in our history comes from within. A government that is supposed to encourage the happiness and wellbeing of its people is not capable of doing so, if it is led by selfish and corrupt individuals.

What is striking about every aspect of this monument is that each virtue requires action. There is nothing passive about the maintenance of the whole self-supporting structure. You cannot strip away one of the foundations without unbalancing the whole fabric of the monument. Everything is interdependent.

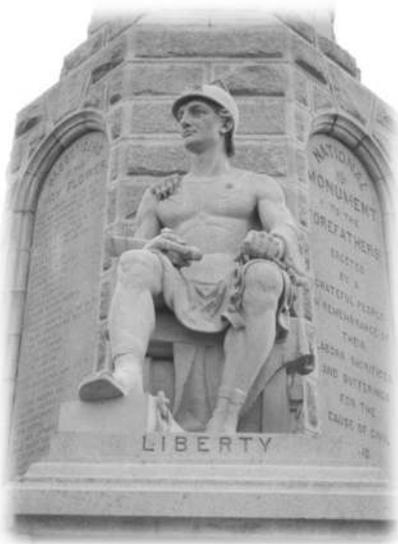

Our Founding Fathers were devout students of history and the forms of government that had existed up until then. They studied types of governments, including the mob rule of Democracy. They found them all to be lacking a support structure that supports liberty.

Only a Constitutional Republic ruled by a people with faith, and supported by the key elements of the Matrix of Liberty, can maintain the unalienable rights endowed by our Creator.

Democracy is an existential threat to our Republic,

~Wade John Taylor

A REPUBLIC IF YOU CAN KEEP IT

Part 2

The concept of “republic”, the public thing, was birthed in 375 BC when Plato wrote his famous Socratic dialogue, Republic. Exploring the “just city-state”, it describes a single boundary utopian government ruled by a philosopher king. Over the next 2000 years, Western societies bounced between one and two boundary government systems, either putting all powers within the monarch or sometimes separating the ruler makers from the rule enforcer, such as the Roman Republic.

In 1748 Montesquieu, a French philosopher, wrote The Spirit of Laws where he proposes a revolutionary third boundary. Today we refer to this idea as the separation of powers:

In every government there are three sorts of power: the legislative; the executive in respect to things dependent on the law of nations; and the executive in regard to matters that depend on the civil law. — The Spirit of the Laws, Book XI

A short thirty years later, the Founders of the United States took the idea of boundaries to an entirely new level when they proposed a government system of not one, two, or three boundaries...but SEVEN. The Founders not only separated powers, but separated governments.

Today there are well over one hundred republics across the globe: Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Republic of Turkey, Islamic Republic of Iran, etc. Clearly these republics are not like our own. What makes ours unique is the number of boundaries. We are the ONLY seven boundary system in the world. Why are boundaries important? They are layers of protection. Your city, your county, your state are safeguards from Trump or Biden. Boundaries are the checks and balances. Thomas Jefferson said it best:

“The way to have good and safe government, is not to trust it all to one, but to divide it among the many, distributing to every one exactly the functions he is competent to. Let the national government be entrusted with the defence of the nation, and its foreign and federal relations; the State governments with the civil rights, laws, police, and administration of what concerns the State generally; the counties with the local concerns of the counties, and each ward direct the interests within itself. It is by dividing and subdividing these republics from the great national one down through all its subordinations, until it ends in the administration of every man's farm by himself; by placing under every one what his own eye may superintend, that all will be done for the best.”

Ben Franklin told Mrs. Powel, “A republic if you can keep it.” How do you keep it? By maintaining the boundaries and controls within the system.

Humbly yours,

Caty Greene

THE OLD SOLDIER

The old Sergeant stood in his bedroom staring at his medals, commendations, and pictures of fallen comrades in arms on his wall. Memories of the past flooded into his mind.

He recalled the helicopter crash that had fractured his spine and he could still hear the thwop-thwop of the rotors as they wound down just before shattering the canopy of the forest when everything went black.

Memories of funerals and many nights of drinking at the Legion, swapping stories of firefights and shedding tears about friends who took a bullet so that others could go home, flooded his mind.

The cry of a toddler in the distance woke him up to the fact that the past was not where he needed to be at that moment. His family and homestead needed tending to. He glanced to the mirror above the dresser and noticed the long hair that desperately needed a barber.

“Everything in this Country has been shut down for almost a year”, he mumbled to himself.

The buttons on his flannel were quickly done up and, in a moment, he had a jacket and muck boots on as he was out the door. The pigs were squealing as he approached. They always knew when they were going to get fed.

“Father in heaven....” He began.

As the hours ticked away, he continued his ritual of praying while he cared for the animals. This was his time every day to spend quality time with the Almighty to repent of the past and receive inspiration on the future.

By the time the chores were done the sun was dipping behind the mountaintops. It was only a bit after 3:00 P.M., but that is what time we lose the sun in the highlands. At least on this side of the valley anyway. There would be a couple hours yet of daylight, but it was time to go in and check on the family.

His wife was visibly upset, glued to her laptop on the kitchen table as the kettle boiled angrily on the stove behind her.

“Honey the more you look at news the more you are going to get upset.”, he stated.

“But D.C. is burning, and the Whitehouse is being evacuated,” she replied.

He quickly turned, took the kettle off the burner, and pulled up a chair next to his wife. The protests had been escalating for a while. Perhaps she was exaggerating.

Of course, the mainstream news had skewed everything, blaming it on patriots that were rioting, but months of lies and easily identifiable propaganda had helped identify which sources to avoid. He pulled out his own laptop and started researching what was going on in D.C. Then he skimmed through various cities where major military bases were. Looking at local news, he started to see reports of activations and alerts across the country. Military personnel were being recalled to their bases.

He quickly recognized that something else was up. Reports of explosions at an oil refinery and a bomb going off at a major power generating dam in the southwest started pouring in as well. News came across that the President was in a safe location and would be delivering an address shortly. It was presumed that he was going to declare some form of Martial Law.

Suddenly the browser displayed an annoying “Page cannot be displayed.”

The lights flickered out, then back on for a few seconds before finally shutting off completely. His young son started crying that his cartoons had shut off. He quickly started going over his mental checklist...

THIS MONTH IN HISTORY

It is a new year for The Pamphlet. This year we cover events in 1777. On January 2nd General George Washington successfully repulsed a British attack in the Battle of Second Trenton in New Jersey. He sent Lord Charles Cornwallis packing which further boosted moral in the Continental Army.

After the victory, Washington outmaneuvered Cornwallis and moved on Princeton, hoping to capture much needed supplies from the British. He stumbled into a brigade of British forces commanded by Hugh Mercer that was on the way to aid Cornwallis. Washington personally rallied his troops and soundly defeated the redcoats in several engagements.

The Continental Army then marched to Morristown where they quartered for the remainder of the winter.

On January 15th New Connecticut (Vermont) declares independence from England and they declared independence from New York. They did this to stop the fighting amongst themselves. They remained independent throughout the war, and in fact remained an independent nation until two years after Washington became president of the United States under the new U.S. Constitution.

FROM THE EDITOR

Lately, I have had several promptings to turn my attention to the Far East to find the roots of our problems at home. I was guided to do some digging in the corrupt dealings of the Clinton Administration with the Chinese Government during the last part of the twentieth century. I ran across a photo of President Clinton meeting with General Chi Haotian from China. Something about that photo really struck me as important and I could not shake the feeling that it started a chain of events that we find ourselves in now.

First, I investigated President Clintons history with China. President Clinton was responsible for enshrining Permanent Most Favored Nation Status with China and undoing most of the restrictions regarding technology exports to China.

President Clinton publicly gushed over the Chinese in a statement he gave on Most Favored nation Status for China on May 28th, 1993. Additionally, there is some compelling information on Clinton giving MIRV technology to the Chinese that allowed them to mount multiple nuclear warheads on their intercontinental warheads as well. But the Clinton corruption and selling out to personally enrich himself and his foundation was not new news.

So, I started looking into the other man that was in the photo. General Chi Haotian who was the Defense Minister of China. I learned that he oversaw the brutal killing and imprisonment of the Tiananmen Square protestors in 1989. The General was directly responsible for crimes against humanity during a peaceful protest and here he was sitting with the President of the United States. The administration was clearly aware of his human rights violations as they moved up his visit to the Whitehouse in order not to conflict with Human Rights Day.

I dug deeper and what I learned about this man was truly shocking. In 2005 the Epoch Times acquired a secret speech given by Defense Minister Chi Haotian to high-level Communist Party Cadres sometime before his election. I read the lengthy article, which I will post on our website for background. He essentially describes the plan that China had been following for quite some time.

In that plan Haotian described how the Chinese had infiltrated America, had manipulated politicians to get them to move their capital and factories to China and do all the modernizing the country needed at their expense. He went on to explain their doctrine that the Chinese people were the superior race and that they had discovered America prior to Columbus and were entitled to it. He explained that China was on the verge of collapse due to overpopulation, pollution, and lack of resources. They had no choice but to conquer America.

After studying the failures of Germany and Japan in conquering the U.S. the Chinese had come up with a plan that would ultimately involve biological weapons that would weaken us. Ultimately however they would have to invade after they had ensured that we could not launch a nuclear counter strike against them. They would have to kill over two hundred million men, women, and children in order to get the rest of the population to relocate elsewhere.

I did quite a bit more digging and found more documentation that is too lengthy to deliver in this format. In short, I will leave you with what I shall call a "Theory". It is best that I do not call it anything else. I believe that should put my promptings at rest and I can move on to more pressing matters like trying to get us ready for the chaos that is about to happen.

In 1980 a particular nation passed the one billion mark in population. The communist country held a series of meetings where they looked to identify how they were going to support their population. They found that pollution and lack of geographical resources ensured that they did not have the capacity to fix their problem.

They turned to their neighbor, also was a communist country, and worked out trading capacity to stem the tide for a while, but they knew that this was a short-term fix. They were never fond of their neighbors and thought of themselves as racially superior to them and all other races on the planet. Ultimately, they identified several land spaces that would be suitable, but all would invoke the wrath of the most dominant military force in the world. They decided that they would instead have to take on that country and eliminate its inhabitants in order to claim it for itself. This would solve several problems as it would have the resources and space to sustain its population and would no longer have to contend with a dominant enemy. They intended to launch this plan with the aid of their communist neighbors, and they would split the spoils. They figured that most of the nuclear missiles of the United States were pointed at their neighbor and this would allow them to not only defeat the United States, but ultimately their neighbor - who they did not care for anyway. Unfortunately, their neighbor's system of communist government quickly and suddenly collapsed, and they were forced to devise a new plan.

There was a certain general who was well respected in the government we are talking about, one who had earned a reputation for brutality when he assisted the government of purging dissenters of communist rule in the early years of his career. He delivered his plan to the heads of the communist party. Here is a hypothetical speech that he may have given to them.

If I were to defeat the United States of America, I would need several decades to do it. In fact, it may not occur until after I am dead. But our enemy has a short-term memory, and we must use our enemy's weakness against him.

First, we must identify socialist sympathizers in the U.S. Our Comrades from the former Soviet Union sowed seeds of dissent in the late sixties and early seventies. These individuals are in the education system and will be useful.

We can use them to indoctrinate a generation or two for our purposes. This is a critical step as we much destroy the country from the inside out. We must let them do most of the damage themselves before we march in and finish them off.

First, we must diminish their combat forces which are the best in the world right now. We must destroy their masculinity! We can use their own civil rights system against them by promoting homosexuality. We will get them to call masculinity toxic by drawing a correlation to the racism that was once a problem. Most Americans have a strong compassion for women. We will use this against them by convincing them that their manliness is a natural brutality to woman, and they must soften their ways. We will do all that we can to erase the boundaries between the sexes and individualities to the point where they are confused as to what they truly are.

We must get them to produce less so that there will be less men to fight. We promote their bestial tendencies and promiscuity but strongly encourage abortion, sterilization, and all methods available to drive the population down.

We will not be successful in doing this unless we can destroy the Christianity that gives the U.S. a strong moral compass. We need to demonize the worship of something that they cannot see. It is also imperative that we create economic conditions that drive the women out of the homes and into the workforce so that the rearing of the children is more reliant upon the education system which we will control.

To do this we have to destroy their economic self-sufficiency. We will appear to be softening our stance and moving to the western thought if only we had the economic means to do so. This will cause a flood of capital and finance into our country. They will build our factories for us. Of course, we will retain control of all that is built here, and we can use this new fake friendship to extract their intellectual property while we build everything, they can only cheaper.

The greed and corruption of their politicians is ripe for influence. We can use these new partnerships with their corporations to slowly infiltrate their system of lobbyists and this will slowly allow us to gain control over their government. We will buy, bribe, or blackmail whoever we need to in order to make this happen.

We will use their appetite for debt to siphon trillions away from their country to build up our country to the economic powerhouse that we will need to rule the world. We will even initially buy their debt as a measure of good faith until it no longer suits our purpose.

We will use our political puppets to send trillions to countries around the world for programs that we will financially benefit from and gain in influence for our country. It is necessary to utilize their own military and engage it everywhere in the world in conflict to decimate our opposition but never let them win or occupy the territory. We will then be the powers that come in behind the Americans and benefit from the destruction that they cause without being blamed for it and will be peaceful saviors. This will help us to build up our own trade networks and eventually we will rebuild the silk road only larger. The world will not look at us as a country that starts war.

While we are buying up the world supply of Gold using the Americans own money, we will be distracting them with mobs from within that tear down their statues and attack their own history as weak and feckless. The moral wrongs that they have conquered must be amplified as if they still exist to the point that they will come to believe that being white is a sign of inferiority and inherently possesses qualities of racism and selfishness merely by being born.

Their own people will come to hate who they are. Any thoughts of superiority will be purged from their society.

In time, we will have sufficiently weakened their military by promoting racism and weakening combat effectiveness by lowering standards so that women and demasculinized citizens are incorporated. Heavily recruiting from socialist and anarchist pockets of society will add to the chaos in the ranks and moral will be decimated. We will cap that off by finding a President who is receptive to purging the flag officers of patriotic officers while promoting compromised soldiers with a globalist mentality.

The country will be ripe for destruction when hordes of illegal immigrants are smuggled in erasing the sense of national identity. The chaos will be amplified if we can destroy the middle class and create envy between the wealthy and the poor. Race tensions and geographic differences will also be amplified.

The final phase requires that we introduce a bioweapon to capitalize on fear. We will introduce in in our country first and promote the lockdown to show how bad it is. Then quickly undo it once our enemy has implemented it. They will think our methods worked when in fact we were secretly prepared for it ahead of time. Use the spies and puppets that have been bought to promote the lockdown, destroy the economy, wipe out the entire middle class, and promote only businesses where spies have a hold on the board of directors. This will solidify our hold on the country while we create a population that depends upon the state. We will discourage a resurgence in self-sufficiency while we implement the final face.

In the last phase we prop up a politician we already own in one of the parties which we have the most influence. We will steal the election and get every politician we have influence with to support it. This phase can only be done when we control virtually every aspect of American life and propaganda.

We do it after decades of dissent have been sewn by Hollywood, sports teams, and traditional American icons so that their own heritage is in shambles. We ensure that the Patriots are all on one side and their opposition are all on the other. We then steal this election in such a way that the corruption, greed, and division is exposed all without implicating ourselves. Then we spark a civil war with our puppets and watch at the country tears itself to pieces.

When the Americans start destroying themselves, we will implement the gold standard in our economy, and this will prove a death blow to the American system. We will use the chaos to ensure that our operatives can neutralize their nuclear retaliatory capabilities. Then we will launch an invasion under the pretext of humanitarian aid ships and sweep in and conquer the country when they could not mount any sort of defense. Our forces will quickly exterminate whatever people we find until the remnant departs to other lands and the whole territory will be rightfully ours as the superior yellow race.

Of course, the above speech is theoretical, based on hours of research into historical documents of existing speeches and internal documents of the Chinese Communist Party. The actual event that put this plan into motion is not exactly known, but there is enough information to confirm that this is the policy and propaganda that has been perpetuated within the CCP.

I encourage you to do your own research. If you find that it supports, the positions outlined in this article, what would you do? I will leave it for you to draw your own conclusions. One thing that is certain is that we all do not know the complete extent on the things that are going on behind the curtain. If we assume the worst-case scenario, would you be ready for what comes next?

PATRIOT OPINION

I have been reading several news articles lately, from all political spectrums and it is not going to be pretty. It seems like a do or die situation. Or is it?

It seems both sides would like to see a civil war that would divide the United States of America. I am not going to blame anyone for this because there is plenty of blame to go around. It would not do any good anyway.

This is where faith comes in. In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews faith is defined.

"Now faith is being sure of what we hope for and certain of what we do not see."

Further on, it reads, "And without faith it is impossible to please God, because anyone who comes to him must believe he exists, and he rewards those who earnestly seek him."

So, what does this have to do with what is happening today? No matter what happens, God is in charge and we are not. God has a perfect plan and all we have is a human plan. On rare occasions the plans come together. There are a lot of people who want to use fear to control you.

There are those who say that if you do not always wear a mask you will surely die. Others accuse people of being a Russian or Chinese spy. Everywhere we look we see that people are petrified and paranoid. We need to get back to our faith in God because by faith "The people passed through the Red Sea as on dry land, but when the Egyptians tried to do so they were drowned." Can you imagine the type of faith it took for the first person to take the first step? But the action of the first step was required to exercise the faith for the miracle to happen. That same type of faith in today's world is required to stand up against our enemy.

And who is our enemy. He is known commonly as Satan, Lucifer, The Adversary, The Father of all Lies, and a host of other names. He is not your neighbor, your brother or your sister. He may have influence on various people, but all mankind are God's children. Satan is evil incarnate. He is trying to harvest all he can before his time is up. And it will be up soon. He knows that Christ is coming soon. Until that time, he grows in his power and enslaves as many people as he can.

I have faith that Satan will be the looser and Christ the winner. My natural desire is to go to war, physical war with the enemy, to break bones and smash in faces. All that would do is perpetuate a war that would take innocent lives which is happening right now as I type. Our Forefathers gave us a constitution to live by. Our biggest fight right now is to keep that constitution alive.

Where there have been constitutional violations, we must stand up for what is right. And, we must do it with the faith that God will assist us. He can do all things through his faithful followers. If we have done all that we can do, and this constitutional crisis ultimately leads to war. Then we can look ourselves in the mirror and know that we do so with no other choice. Then we do so knowing, that at least we are on the right side.

PATRIOT REFLECTION

WHAT THE BLIND MAN SAW

What does a blind man see? What does a surgeon touch? Of what are our judged?

One man closed his eyes and saw an answer. He lived through times of pain, suffering, and conflict. He did not emerge unscathed. Yet, with eyes closed he saw what was and could be, and he dreamed.

At first, he was alone, then mocked, then scorned. He almost lost everything he held dear. From a position of virtue, his hopes fell on ignorant and deaf ears. Until, one day, a woman was too tired to move from her seat, to move a couple feet.

Of great and earth-shattering things, small things are the seed. It wasn't that the potential did not exist, it was just that the purpose being built around him was destructive. And for any good man, that was unacceptable.

So, he closed his eyes and looked around. Maybe he prayed, maybe he thought, or maybe he just saw divergent paths. If he went along played along marched along, he would be as kindling to a flame in stride with those who would destroy for destructions sake.

But if he risked all gave all forgave all, there was a different ending. A dream. What really does a blind man see? Night or day? On faces of friend or foe? Is it intent, character, or beauty no matter the scars each bear?

What does the surgeon touch in carnage or diagnosis, holding life in his hands? What difference can he sense in the loss of potential, hate, or love?

When your days are done, your heart sits on the balance, your soul laid against the yardstick, your sins listed against you; how are you different than any other?

There is a time of fire coming. It is not now, and it is not by you. There is a time of anger. You will know its time, but you will not fall to it, fuel it, or seek it. There is a time of conflict. You will not wage it nor experience it. Of the rest are cycles of food and famine, life and loss, now and then, and here and there. People who have and people who have not, for a time. Nothing you do, no matter intentions or effort will change those three words, for a time.

Today though is a decision. Do you dare to dream a small dream from which grand things grow? Do you seek the truth of the blind, walking in faith through weapons on all sides? Seeking instead each person's character and beauty and value?

A blind man sees no color of skin nor race of man. A surgeon touches the inside knowing all are the same regardless of cover. The balance of a life cares little for the adversity faced, it values instead how character rose to meet it.

One man started his walks alone, his talks to few, and passed on his dreams to many. He changed our country, our lives, our world. In his time, he turned his back on anger, hatred, and violence; and found a better path. He sought truth and found the eyes of the blind; we are all the same. He truly believed all lives do matter.

Martin Luther King changed our world for the better, heading off the riots and violence and bigotry of those around him and facing him. His arguments to end the hatred and conflict were legendary. His recognition of both forgiveness and personal responsibility just as emphatic. His dream for a continual building towards equality which now seems lost forever. It lasted for a while, until now.

Of what did he dream? His friends, his foes, sharing grandchildren and great grandchildren. We have that today. Opportunity and achievement for all, already written into the history books.

So, you sit, this book in your lap, watching words appear. On one side of you is the light of tomorrow. On the other the flames of today. Your choice in adversity. Do you dare to dream a dream?

FINAL THOUGHTS

I still find it amazing how the contents of each issue of The Pamphlet seem to come to me at the right time for what we are all going through as a people. This time I would love to be wrong about what has come to me in this publication.

After many heartbreaking defeats, General George Washington spent many dreadful nights in freezing winter conditions. Yet he was found many times in seclusion, on his knees in silent prayer. He knew where he needed to turn when things were looking hopeless.

There were times Washington and his army barely escaped disaster. There were times when his troops had no coats and stood bare foot in the snow. He struggled to provide food for the army and medical attention for the troops was desperately needed. They did desperate things to win the war.

Back then, inoculation meant giving yourself the disease. Soldiers sliced open their own skin to inject puss from victims of smallpox, knowing that it could kill them or their families. But the gamble worked. The army was not incapacitated because of smallpox.

This is of course not to be taken as a support for the current experimental vaccinations that have been rushed into production by companies who are racing to be the first in line to receive vast fortunes. I personally do not support them, although I will not stand in the way of free will either. Taking or not taking it is of course, your own decision.

It may seem like things are hopeless. It appears that the Republic is truly lost, and the corrupt elite have seized the reigns of this runaway horse. But the world we live in is not even close to the worst thing that can ever happen. We have just had it so good for so long that simple struggles about right and wrong are foreign to most people.

Consider that at this moment the power is on, the internet is chugging away, and you can still go to the store to get essentials to feed your family. Do not freak out and get bogged down in the daily news cycle. Things will certainly get worse, but even that will not be the end of the world. We are far more resilient than that as a species.

Most minds in this modern age are fragile. Many people run around with their hair on virtual fire screaming, "This can't be happening". They hang on every piece of information, every channel, and every website, wanting to be the first to know where the where the fire is without considering that there are buckets of water all around. They do nothing but let the fire burn while waiting for someone else to save them.

So, here take my advice and accept that the system is broken. For now, most people are not going to do something about it. When you start doing something then others will find the courage to follow. Until then, expect more of the same.

Yes, the election was stolen. The corrupt politicians on both side of the isles were willing to do anything to give an outsider like Trump the boot because he was a threat to their very existence. Governors, Senators, Representatives, Councilmen, Judges, Mayors, Attorneys General, and all manner of government officials and employees are corrupted by greed and power. They are owned by Parties, Corporations, and China. Even though we have fighters like Trump and warriors like Flynn, most people just want to make sure that Taco Bell and Walmart stay open so they can get their useless junk food and trinkets. All that those in power have to do is ensure that their voters don't have to do anything except watch porn, play video games, and catch up on the latest Netflix binge.

The Republic, for all intents and purposes is lost. That is not to say that it is lost forever, but at this juncture it is lost. It has been converted into a dysfunctional Democracy by selfish elites. There are too many people on the sidelines for that to change today.

Winter, however; is coming on strong. There are things in motion that you and I could not even fathom. There will be hunger and desperation that will make the hearts of the people fail. There will be oppression beyond what you thought is capable in this country.

Now that you have that in your mind, understand that terrible things are necessary to get people to wake up. It was the same way two hundred and fifty years ago. Most people can't be bothered to do anything about their situation. They are simply like frogs in cold water brought to a slow boil.

But the oppression and blatant disregard for the will of the people will spark the Revolution. Then we will smoke out the rats that have salted the liberty tree. There are state lawmakers in many states that are already talking of secession. There are counties that are already in the active process of seceding from their states. This country is well on its way to fracture. This is unfortunate but necessary for there to be an effective healing later.

There will be lone wolves that blow up power stations and transmission lines to disrupt the cities. There will be strikes by truckers and factory workers. Internet lines will be severed, and trains will be derailed by people who have had enough on both sides of the isle. State by State, County by County, and even City by City secession will become commonplace. The elites have gone too far.

But this is a diversion promoted by a far more nefarious plot. China has been buying up every available barrel of oil it can find and strategically positioning their armed forces for rapid deployment. Russia has put to sea a massive fleet and is mobilizing many of their forces. The United States has deployed no less than six carrier fleets since November 30th, taking up defensive position on the Pacific and Atlantic coasts. There are false rumors of Chinese troops already invading our country and misinformation is flooding in from sources within our country. China cannot feed their own people and their financial situation is tenuous at best. They have been instrumental in fracturing this country before and during the election process. Their hands and fingerprints are all over much of the fraud throughout the country. The communist party needs a war to distract its people from the problems that they face internally. It is likely that they helped divide our nation in order to attempt to conquer us through a lightning strike that will make pearl harbor look like child's play.

Now that I have your attention with what may happen in the worst way, accept it as if it already happened. This will help you because anything less than that will be easier to deal with. Even if those worst case happens, you will be better prepared.

There is still time to prepare for stormy seas ahead. Batten down the hatches, trim the sails, and secure the cargo. Hurricanes are completely survivable for ships that are prepared to sail through them.

This is one of those times where I really hope that the feelings and premonitions that I have are wrong. I would love to be laughed at this time next year as someone who really got it wrong. Just in case, I will be preparing for it.

MATRIX OF LIBERTY

Pamphlets that were widely distributed during the founding of our Republic and were instrumental in securing our inalienable rights from the tyrannical rule of the day. The most popular, “Common Sense” written by Thomas Paine in 1775-1776 is still well worth a read.

Through these pamphlets, the soul of our new nation and the will to defend of our unalienable rights, was born. Our Divine Creator inspired the great men of that day to ensure nothing takes away those freedoms. They enshrined them in our founding documents.

Nowadays oppressive and corrupt politicians, judges, and bureaucrats have teamed up with diabolical corporations and media outlets to subjugate the population. They openly support racist Marxist communist organizations. They declare that their goal is the destruction of churches, cultural institutions, private businesses, and ultimately The United States of America. They have no qualms committing treason by fixing elections.

That same tyranny we the people overthrew two hundred and forty-four years ago is rampant again. The Pamphlet has been resuscitated from the dust to spread the word. We are rallying true patriots and freedom loving people everywhere to take up the banner of liberty. We are common people just like you and our Tree of Liberty has been planted.

This land is our land. We will not go quietly into the night and fade away. We are here to stay. Live free or die.
