PERSEVERANCE

Valley Forge represents the pinnacle of American perseverance during times of trial. The difficulties that the Continental Army suffered during this period are enshrined in the annals of many histories. It is difficult to understand what our forefathers had to endure in order to endure until victory was achieved.

In this issue we attempt to inspire you to endure the difficult times that we find ourselves in. The War of Independence was over eight years long and that was only the open conflict part of it. The struggle for liberty is one that continues even to this day. There are always those who would subjugate and enslave people purely out of their own feelings of entitlement. But we have won this war before, and we will be victorious in the years ahead.

PERSEVERANCE

Introduction:

In this issue we visit some of the challenges during the War of Independence. Fighting for liberty is not always easy, but failure to fight guarantees subjugation. By learning from our past, we can find out the qualities that it takes to rise to the occasion and become the masters of our own destiny as we challenge the tyranny of today.

Here are the articles in this issue.

I recently was reading through the National Archives and going through some of the Founding Fathers who were Anti-Federalists. I have been looking at many of the Anti-Federalist papers lately and I am starting to form a strong opinion that they were right to oppose giving the federal government too much power. Certainly, our first government was too weak but our second one is too strong.

I ran across James Monroe our fifth President of the United States. I started reading the Monroe papers and ran across some of his early documents that described his experiences during the Revolutionary War. These experiences give us some inspiration to persevere through difficult times. I will summarize some of them briefly below.

Monroe was attending the College of William and Mary until it was closed around January of 1776 due to the ongoing war with the British. He joined the 3rd Virginia Regiment. Shortly thereafter he received his commission as a lieutenant and the 3rd Virginia Regiment was sent to New York where they joined Washington's forces in the Battle of Long Island.

Monroe's company along with two others from the regiment were reinforced with troops from Connecticut. They were sent from their post at Harlem Heights to oppose the enemy advance after they had landed, took the city, and ravaged Fort Washington. They engaged the enemy and suffered heavy losses including two of the company commanders. The British were forced to find another avenue of approach in their attempt to outflank the troops around Fort Washington.

The 3rd Virginia regiment engaged the British at White Plains and was forced to retreat again after heavy losses. As the British advanced on Fort Washington, the regiment was ordered to Fort Lee to protect it.

The Continental Army was defeated at both Fort Washington and Fort Lee as General Washington gathered his remaining forces and retreated into New Jersey. The British were hot on their heels, but the army did not run. They fought an orderly retreat, “which will be forever celebrated in the annals of our country, for the patient suffering, the unshaken firmness, and gallantry of the small band when brought to action, of which the army consisted, and of the great & good qualities of its commander.”

They arrived on the opposite shore of Trenton, New Jersey. The mighty Delaware River separated them from Enemy troops. Winter arrived and the enemy settled into winter quarters believing that the Continental Army was all but destroyed.

Lieutenant Monroe goes on to explain that after a long string of defeats some considered “the great question whether they were competent, and resolved to support their independence or would sink under the pressure?”

The resolve and steadfast determination are clearly displayed as Monroe continues.

“The councils of the union, exhibited a firmness, which shewed, that they were equal to the crisis.”

Monroe goes on to praise Congress for their support and General Washington for being attentive to his duties. This remarkable determination at a time when the British even thought that they had won is remarkable. It demonstrates to us the qualities that were needed to secure liberty from a dominating tyranny.

Monroe was wounded shortly afterward following the crossing of the Delaware in the Battle of Trenton as he led his unit in the battle. After recovering from his wounds Monroe was promoted to Captain and continued the fight for independence never losing an ounce of resolve. He would need the same resolve during the War of 1812 when the British invaded the Capital.

BY MORNING'S LIGHT

An army that never knew victory. Soldiers without coats and food. A winter encampment with only two saving graces: seclusion and multiple avenues of escape. Doctors collapsed in exhaustion, fading cries of the dying, ravings of those sick with the pox. And, running through the camp, rumors the General was seen wandering the woods. It is bitterly cold, huddled around a smoking campfire, wind probing skin from the clothes shared among your group from a fellow town militiaman who did not survive the previous night. Someone whose wife and children you had all sworn to support if you got out of it alive.

At no time in our nation's history has our survival been so tenuous. Later, we would have a civil war where we would survive, not knowing at times how we would be governed. But in that winter, starving frozen men stared at each other, knowing they could not even desert as they all had a price on their heads. Only one more defeat away from losing the war, there was no darker time in our nation.

Then, in the dark and out of the smoke, the sound of a cart. A woman, protected only by her virtue and a young boy, pulled up to the command tent. Getting to your feet, your group started forward, as a wagon with a pastor and his wife followed hers, then from another direction, men pointed, a mule led by an old man and woman. Throughout the night they rolled in. Not many of them, none carry much. Yet all carrying something. Old clothes to stay warm, rag rugs stripped from floors for bedrolls, some bread or cornmeal, or old vegetables to fill pots and bellies. Night after night, a couple at a time. Gone in the morning to take care of stock and land. Some staying on to care for the sick, to feed the well, to clean up the camp. As the general wept openly.

This was a turning point although you did not know it. Another foreigner, unlike your fellow immigrants, this one in uniform, pointing to your officers, looking, talking, as they took notes. Tents put in lines, men put into groups to dig toilets, cut wood, wash clothes. And some men, hauled away, to come back a week or two later, different, with resolve and ideas, and most important, some authority. Out of this winter of despair came a forging of a standard of military the world would seek to emulate. A legend of resolve of a nation. The introduction of inoculations in medicine and the military non-commissioned officer, changing the future.

We survived, and triumphed. Because the poor stripped their homes of rags and rugs and food to keep a losing army alive. Because people drove through the night to avoid detection, to deliver food and warmth. Because a Hessian officer with a vision deserted his army to teach some raw soldiers how to lead at all levels and ranks. To take personal responsibility.

Today each citizen carries within them the heritage of this resolve. It is cut deep into our bones, written on our skin, cast in our souls. We have need of it now, more than ever, as we are, unbelievably, openly, promised worse than then.

In the darkened woods, alone, a general prayed to his creator for a miracle in humbleness for help, in humility for hope. He received many blessings, more than he ever imagined, and, ultimately, a nation in the end. So, hold firm to hope, strengthen your resolve, and pray to your creator. The future is dark, only because we do not know how it will end.

The military NCO, a compilation of European traditions, was brought to the continental army in 1778, at Valley Forge, by Prussian Inspector General Friedrich von Steuben. He standardized NCO duties and responsibilities for the Continental Army NCO Corps. It is widely accepted. This development helped sustain the Continental Army through severe hardships including Valley Forge and reforged our military.

Washington led his troops to Valley Forge, where they had little food and clothing for the winter. The Continental Congress could not provide the supplies requested. The army of about 9-12,000 lived in crude log huts it took all winter for most to be completed. One of the graces of Valley Forge was a lack of most gentried residences and relative lack of a population. Thus, preventing looting by the army enlisted, looking for provisions. By spring 1778, nearly a fourth of the soldiers had died of malnutrition, exposure to the cold, and such diseases as smallpox and typhoid fever. Of those who died while there, most died at the nation's first military hospital established a few miles away at Yellow Springs. One of the last casualties at this hospital, was the founder of the hospital.

The conditions of Valley Forge were so severe, General Washington refused to discuss them in letters and requests, making the extraordinary claim for that time that they would "harm your feelings". Claiming of the 9,000 men present, 1/3 were incapable of movement, let alone fighting being effectively "naked" to the elements. In a way, Washington was stating, he would not be believed or in belief, the reader would think all was lost.

Washington, in a well-reasoned decision, declared all huts would be uniform, laid out in a specific order, worthy, and furnished with scavenged straw due to the lack of bedding. Where most European armies of the time housed in confiscated housing or encampments of tents. Washington, by removing the temptation of theft from his men, prevented the hated British forced housing (the quartering act), and providing universally adequate housing. Thus, he retained the good will of the population and a sustainable degree of comfort for his men. In addition, General Washington's wife was routinely seen around camp, helping among the women and families of the camp followers, who suffered along with their husbands and fathers. How could any man complain when the General's wife suffered without complaint?

Washington was known for his reflections with God while wandering in the woods but was admired for his tireless efforts to feed and clothe his men. His wife, for her work in gaining aid through local resources and the assistance among the camp follower ladies. And unusually enough, a patriotic baker, who through his knowledge turned the basic and meager supplies into palatable food.

It was the random acts of kindness and the fear of being caught that kept many from deserting and brought supplies in at odd hours or under cover of escort. Of the intolerable acts, none was so capable of abuse than The Administration of Justice Act. This "Murder Act" gave free license to British to murder colonials under accusation of assistance to the colonial army. While some did get furloughs to go home to family during this harsh winter, and a few merchants who would take the colonial scripts of IOUs while hiding their dealings from the authorities. They were not there or then.

KEEP IT

Boundaries are important things. Kids need boundaries. Governments need boundaries. After Plato, the Western world spent 2000 years bouncing between one and two boundary government systems. Montesquieu added a third, followed by the Founders' brilliant seven boundary system. Today we have a group of people who want to destroy six of the seven boundaries, taking us back to Plato's single boundary Republic. Instead of regressing, I would argue for more boundaries, particularly an eighth placed on the judicial branch.

Contrary to the notion of "equal branches of government", the judicial branch was designed to be the weakest power of government. For the first 135 years, Supreme Court justices were relegated to the Congressional basement. They are not there to make law, only provide opinion. Judges do not sit for life, but based on good behavior as defined by the legislative branch.

"You seem . . . to consider the judges as the ultimate arbiters of all constitutional questions; a very dangerous doctrine indeed, and one which would place us under the despotism of an oligarchy. Our judges are as honest as other men, and not more so . . . and their power [is] the more dangerous, as they are in office for life and not responsible, as the other functionaries are, to the elective control. The Constitution has erected no such single tribunal, knowing that to whatever hands confided, with corruptions of time and party, its members would become despots." - Thomas Jefferson letter to William Jarvis, Sept. 28, 1820

Seeing the despotism of the judiciary, citizens pursued the Idaho Judicial Accountability Act in 2006. It did not make the threshold of required signatures, but it gives one an idea of what a possible eighth boundary might look like:

It creates a special citizens grand jury, permanently operating and exclusively dedicated to the review of judicial misconduct complaints. It both protects the judicial officers from frivolous and harassing litigation, while affording citizens an avenue to find justice. Any case found to have merit would be sent to separate trial jury for trial.

Potentially self-funding after the initial start-up, the long-term goal of this Act is to apply consequences for judicial misconduct and remove judicial officers for repeated misconduct, thereby assuring that the judiciary follows the constitution and laws of this state. And when the judiciary is held accountable, the other branches of government can be held accountable when the citizenry seeks justice in the courts.

Did you know? The word “spartan” means self-restrained, simple, frugal and austere. The word “laconic”, which means pithy and concise, is derived from the Spartans, who prized brevity of speech.

When I hear “Sparta”, the first thing I think of is the movie 300. Did you know that the Spartan women portrayed in the movie ring true to history? Sparta was the ultimate single boundary totalitarian state. Everything, and everyone, existed for the good of Sparta. In the famous Battle of Thermopylae, King Leonidas picked 300 warriors to take on 300,000 Persians. According to the story, warriors were not chosen for their prowess and skill, but because of the strength of their women. The king knew that even though the men were destined to die, if Sparta were to survive, it would endure because of her women.

So, what made Spartan women so special?

Spartan women were smart. They were taught to read, write, and were schooled in art and music. They were expected to participate in intellectual discussions on politics, philosophy, mythology, and law. As the story goes, Athenian men were quite intimidated by the female Spartan quick wit and sharp tongue, particularly in their criticism of Athenian politics.

Spartan women were also athletic and fit. They were expected to run, wrestle, throw the javelin, and toss the discus. They boxed and rode horses. They knew how to fight and were even allowed to athletically compete with the men. Due to their rigorous physical activity, Spartan women dressed in little more than a short dress that showed their shapely legs, hence the Athenians calling the women “thigh-showers”. Spartan women were given plenty of food and provisions to guarantee their ability to give birth to healthy children. In fact, women had to pass a physical fitness test at the age of 18 to receive full citizenship to Sparta.

Spartan women were old when they married. When other Greek women were married off at fourteen, Spartans married between the age 18 and 20 to warriors closer to their age.

Spartan women were free. Unlike their Greek counterparts of the time, Spartan women owned land and other property. It is said that Spartan women owned up to one third of the lands. The men, being conscripted to the military for 30 years, left the management of their households to their wives. Spartan warriors often did not live to retirement, leaving the inheritance to their wives to manage.

Clearly, Spartan women were not subjugated - at least in our modern sense. I would argue that Spartan men were enslaved to the military industrial complex. In Politics, Aristotle blames the downfall of Greece on its ungovernable women, "what is the difference between governors being governed by women and women being actually governors?" So, who rules the world? Even Aristotle knew...if momma ain't happy, ain't nobody happy.

Humbly yours,

FIRE WITH FIRE

There is power in words when they are weaponized against the human psyche. The radical left has been doing this for years and they have upped the ante now that they have a senile corrupt career politician as President. Biden's critical onset dementia seems to be already hindering his official capacity to execute his duties. Recent video footage has shown the aged President mumbling that he did not know what he was signing recently as he etched his signature on yet another executive order that is destabilizing our Republic. How long until the communist Kamala assumes the reins of power due to Joe's deteriorating condition?

It is imperative that we brand the radicals that have hijacked this nation for what they are. We must echo it far and wide to combat the narrative that these plutocratic narcissists have adopted to subjugate liberty loving individuals everywhere.

Black Lives Matter Inc. is a group of Black Supremacists and they must be referred to as such. Antifa is nothing less than Violent Anarchists and we need to ensure Americans know that supporting them is supporting violence. Movements that promote the slaughter of the unborn or recently born must be called out as the Abortion Radicals that they are. It is unconscionable that they are now calling for access for mothers to murder of an infant who is fully developed. This is truly radicalized insanity.

The movement of Socialist Terrorists that have infiltrated our government, Black Supremacist and Violent Anarchists in order to overthrow our Constitutional Republic, must be referred to in the proper light so that Americans know of their true intentions. They seek to terrorize us into submission. What is truly shocking is the level of support that they have within the ranks of both sides of the political spectrum and throughout the corporate hierarchy in America. We need to stop supporting them by boycotting their goods and services while becoming ungovernable.

What is perhaps the most dangerous of all, however, is the atheist extremists that have been rooting out every instance of the Judeo-Christian founding of this country. This has been going on for decades and has reached the point of demonization of anyone who professes any faith in the Creator and Divine principals that this country was founded on. As we discussed last month in our Matrix of Liberty issue, without the key principals laid out in the National Monument to the Forefathers, our Republic will cease to exist. Perhaps this is the plan after all.

But we have a plan of our own. We will speak truth to power. We will persevere when we are honest when we speak about the brigands that seek to dominate us.

~Wade John Taylor

Our path forward is going to require that we remain vigilant against the radicalized elements that are thriving in the seats of power throughout the nation. Everywhere we look, black supremacists, atheist extremists, violent anarchists, abortion radicals, and socialist terrorists, are promoted by many in government as the path forward.

At the same time, they vilify patriotic everyday Americans, peaceful Christians, supporters of life, and those who would restore the Republic, as criminals that must be incarcerated and forcibly re-educated. The unalienable rights guaranteed by the Bill of Rights, has never been under attack to this degree in the history of our nation.

These are all things that we need to keep in mind as we move forward. Things will get much worse for the Patriot movement before they get better. But this is not a problem as much as it is a blessing. The more that the radicalized powers in control of the administration move this country along the path of tyranny, the more that honest good-natured citizens will flock to the truth that was instituted by our Founding Fathers. Unalienable rights always survive oppression. The greater the subjugation the more that Natural Law shines as the path to personal sovereignty.

As we increase our awareness as to our awful situation, we must remain steadfast in preserving our good nature. It is easy to become jaded and fall for the trap of becoming the radicals that they paint us as. We must remember that the enemy is not those that are brainwashed by the propaganda of the true radicals that are actively dismantling the Republic. They are mere victims of this cruel plan and we must do everything humanly possible to educate them as to the reality that they live in.

We assist in this great effort when we brand the true radicals for what they are. When we do this, it becomes easier to persevere against tyranny. We must not be silent in our afflictions and we cannot revile away from declaring the truth. We must turn away from fear as that is their tool of domination.

The most powerful piece of political art I've ever seen.

You may be wondering how it is that we will persevere and endure this outright onslaught against the traditional patriotic citizenry in this country. As always, I think it is imperative that we look to our past for some inspiration on how to survive during this time of conflict and tyranny. In the library of congress online under the heading of Religion and the Founding of the American Republic we find the following information about our first government under our first constitution.

"The Continental-Confederation Congress, a legislative body that governed the United States from 1774 to 1789, contained an extraordinary number of deeply religious men. The amount of energy that Congress invested in encouraging the practice of religion in the new nation exceeded that expended by any subsequent American national government. Although the Articles of Confederation did not officially authorize Congress to concern itself with religion, the citizenry did not object to such activities. This lack of objection suggests that both the legislators and the public considered it appropriate for the national government to promote a nondenominational, nonpolemical Christianity.

Congress appointed chaplains for itself and the armed forces, sponsored the publication of a Bible, imposed Christian morality on the armed forces, and granted public lands to promote

Christianity among the Indians. National days of thanksgiving and of "humiliation, fasting, and prayer" were proclaimed by Congress at least twice a year throughout the war. Congress was guided by "covenant theology," a Reformation doctrine especially dear to New England Puritans, which held that God bound himself in an agreement with a nation and its people. This agreement stipulated that they "should be prosperous or afflicted, according as their general Obedience or Disobedience thereto appears." Wars and revolutions were, accordingly, considered afflictions, as divine punishments for sin, from which a nation could rescue itself by repentance and reformation.

The first national government of the United States, was convinced that the "public prosperity" of a society depended on the vitality of its religion. Nothing less than a "spirit of universal reformation among all ranks and degrees of our citizens," Congress declared to the American people, would

"make us a holy, that so we may be a happy people."

We have clearly departed from the moral fabric that was necessary to forge this country. While our government may have lost it, we do not have to follow their corruption. If we strengthen our own personal faith, work with others of the same conviction, and dutifully strive to ensure that those in local government subscribe to the same traditional values then we can ensure that our own neighborhoods start to return to our founding principles. Our burden becomes more bearable when we are not alone in our strife.

We must encourage other locales to do the same throughout the country. Support those communities who have achieved these results as the standard within our nation and not accept failure as an option. In the Infantry we put one foot in front of the other, taking deliberate steps toward victory while encouraging others to do the same. As we do this, we are assured that we can eventually restore the Republic to its former glory and prominence. The key is just to keep moving forward no matter what.

The country has already crossed the Rubicon. The socialist terrorists have been pulling the strings and are now in power. They are encouraging an all-out assault upon anyone who is a patriot or promotes the ideals of individual liberty. President Biden is signing his signature to whatever is placed in front of him at a pace unheard of. There will be dark times ahead. Accept it. But know that years of struggle are normal for the soul of liberty to rise from the bowels of our nation.

As we stay true to salvaging our local government, while preparing for the worst. It is possible, even likely, that certain aspects of government may become ineffective and, in some areas, the temporary absence of governance may persist for some time. That will not affect us if we heal our communities and bind together as a single body of liberty. We shall overcome.

I strongly encourage a personal food and water supply for you, your family, and friends, for at least a month. One year should be the goal that you work up to, and if nothing else will provide peace of mind during uncertainty. I strongly encourage you to not advertise what you have. Boasting of your preparedness may make you a target by opportunists during desperate times.

It is for that reason that I suggest some personal defense items such as firearms and ammunition. Those items are incredibly difficult to come by now days. Keep in mind that a bow or an axe would be better than a frying pan but in all cases be prepared for a worst-case scenario for a short period of time of up to a year.

Consider a garden, chickens, rabbits, or other food production items as soon as it is possible for your future wellbeing, and that of your family or friends. Even in the unlikely event of stability and prevalent food, I find the work in producing one's own food calming and delicious.

Keep the faith. Stay vigilant. Prepare what you can. We will get through this if we unite under the banner of liberty.

~Wade John Taylor

---

While there were no major battles during February of 1777 there were plenty of small skirmishes and a few minor naval battles.

On February 1st near Drake's Farm close to Metuchen, New Jersey, British and Colonial units squared off and fought to a stalemate. 40 Colonials and 36 British were killed, and 100 troops were wounded.

February 2nd - 4th British forces attacked Fort McIntosh in Georgia and were victorious.

February 6th the HMS Solebay captured the sloop Speedwell. On the 7th Solebay captured the schooner Hope and the brig Fortune. On the 9th Solebay captured the schooner Little Dick. The Little Dick ended up getting stuck on the Nassau Bar, but the remaining ships sailed to Jamaica.

On February 13th the SC Navy brig Comet captured a large British ship and sent it to Charlestown. The Defense also sent in two prize ships.

On February 23rd at Spanktown, New Jersey Lt. Colonel Charles Mawhood lead a reinforced brigade on a patrol to destroy any Colonial units he could catch. He met up with four regiments from New Jersey and 2 Regiments from Pennsylvania as well as the German Battalion. The British forces were beaten back severely with 69 casualties and 6 wounded. Meanwhile the Colonials only suffered 5 deaths and 9 wounded.

On February 27th the SC Navy brig Comet captured two more British ships. One carrying mahogany and the other carrying logwood.

The road less traveled is often the most pleasant. After the events over the past five years, I believe that more than ever.

During the 2016 campaign for President, we were all inundated with the illegal activities of Hillary Clinton. So many anonymous sources kept popping up that stated that new evidence was about ready to be presented that would ensure that she was going to jail. Many of those anonymous sources turned out to be wrong.

What really confused the matter was that the Clintons were so sloppy that tons of evidence did exist and did come out that was illegal. However, their influence into the corrupt machine of the U.S. Government knows no bounds and despite the evidence and the body count of people who turned against them nothing will ever be done by the legal system.

Then the mysterious CIA Psychological Operation (PSYOP) called Q showed up.

For the first few months I was intrigued and was on the fence as to the validity of what was being put out there.

As the months rolled on “Breadcrumbs” called to the hope of patriots everywhere to believe that there was a chess game being played between masters and that Trump oversaw it all and had everyone outplayed.

The challenge of trying to figure out the coded messages kept so many minds busy on the code that they failed to take a mile-high view of the situation or, at the very least, instill some critical thinking.

Before digging into this further I must give a bit of full disclosure. Toward the end of the Trump Administration, I found myself grasping at any bit of hope that I could find and was more likely than usual to grasp onto authority figures spreading disinformation. While I had long dismissed the Q theories as a PSYOP, I did latch onto General Michael Flynn, Businessman Mike Lindell, the Lawyers Lin Wood, and Sydney Powell. These were tangible people who had a reputation and they continually stated that Trump was going to be President for another four years.

Were they as desperate as I was to uncover the vast amount of fraud that we all knew possible, or were they part of the PSYOP? I cannot say one way or another, perhaps a mix of both. What I do know is that a good portion of the American people were played and given a great deal of false hope. The question is why?

If we look at what it accomplished, the answer will reveal itself. For the entire Trump Administration millions of Americans stood by and did nothing to stand up for liberty and against the abuse of the corruption in the government as it attacked an elected president and the Republic that he was trying to clean up. They did this because we were told by some phantom to “trust the plan”. (not enemy as Q seemed a friend at the time)

The President surrounded himself with advisors embedded in the Republican Party who were supposed to be supporting him. In fact, they sabotaged his efforts and betrayed the nation in order to restore the status quo of corruption that had endured for decades.

Trump was not supposed to win the election. Fraud so massive that it could not be hid was necessary to reinstate control by globalists. They are now four years behind on their plan to collapse the western economies in the “Great Reset”. Make no mistake the result of their plan would see Western Governments become irrelevant and superseded by a global government of oppression.

We must be deliberate, intelligent, and be willing to persevere through adversity in order to gain the upper hand.

INK

What power in a language? What summation in a word? To hear the silence of great orators, take a breath. To feel the power of their hearts and minds by print and publication.

Of founding fathers were foundations laid. From their thoughts were great works wrought. By records of their letters were articles written. In research by many did their pamphlets come to print.

Through speeches and publications were arguments shared. Great men understood. Common cause discovered. A history recorded.

In a time of rebirth puppeteers in the shadows are exposed by light of knowledge and honor. Networks of lies laid bare. Skeletons of crimes exposed.

From vitality and enthusiasm, a timeline has been broken. A planning scattered. The opponent off balance and ill prepared.

Tyranny, treason, corruption, lies. These crimes once and once again brought, and bring, good and great men to their feet to seek justice. Of one accord.

All recorded by the power of a language, its words, in speeches, through articles, from periodicals. Printed, published, and distributed in simple pamphlets.

Exactly like the one you read now.

HOMESTEAD RESILIENCE

Welcome to the new Homestead Resilience section of The Pamphlet. One of our Patriot Supporters recommended that I put a new section in that gives helpful hints on how to increase self-reliance and become more resilient during times of emergency and instability. While we temporarily had to retire a column to make room, we feel that this section will benefit more people in the end. Without further ado, let's get started.

RESILIENCE TIP

One of the most important aspects of being prepared for difficult times is water preparation and storage. Many people in our area are on well water. While this seems like a great idea, most of the properties cannot draw any water without power. Those people who are reliant on public water as a utility will also be without water shortly after the power goes out.

Water storage solutions can be expensive and as a result most people tend to have an insufficient reserve.

For those individuals that drink soda I recommend switching to two-liter bottles. After each use wash and rinse them out thoroughly. Then fill with fresh water and add two drops of chlorine bleach to help keep contaminants at bay. The more soda you drink the larger your water supply grows. Your supply is good for at least a year and you can rotate it out to keep it fresh. I have been doing this for years and I have several hundred bottles. I have built some handy storage racks for them and it is nice to have an emergency supply of water for when I need it.

FOOD STORAGE

Another thing that I hear quite often is that people tell me that they cannot afford to store up food for difficult times. The easiest way to do this is to add a bag of rice, beans, a couple packages of gravy, and 12 cans of vegetables each time you shop. In no time at all you will have a basic food storage that would keep you alive. As you go on you can diversify and branch out into other non-perishables.

Additionally, here is another Patriot Supporter idea, a recipe you can make using your stored food. Here are the ingredients to a simple Tuna Casserole recipe:

3 Cans of Tuna

1 Can Cream of Chicken Soup

1 Can Cream of Mushroom Soup

1 Can of Peas

1 Pound of Pasta, already cooked

½ Cup of Dried Parmesan Cheese

Mix and cook at 350 degrees for about a half hour and serve.

All the above ingredients are shelf stable. The dried Parmesan is good for at least a year unopened and can last longer if kept in a cool dry storage space. If you rotate your foods once you have a food storage developed, you could easily purchase an extra meal every time you go shopping and store it away.

What other recipes could you do this with?

I hope you have enjoyed our new section. Next month we will improve on this section and it will likely become a regular section in our printings to aid in helping you prepare for challenging times.

PATRIOT OPINION

If every citizen were as dedicated to the preservation of the Republic as the Culper Ring was during the Revolutionary War, there would be no threat today from radicals that have taken over this country.

This country has not faced such tyranny since the War of Independence. In some cases, the British Parliament and Throne were not as tyrannical as the current regime. Every day that goes by a modern version of the “Stamp Act” or “Sugar Act” is signed by executive order. No such degree of tyranny would have been allowed to exist in our early years as a Nation. Defiance then was justified, today even more so.

Perhaps it is time to call the tyrants ‘Redcoats’ again. At least call them what they are. Traitors.

Regardless, the only thing that can be done now is what was done then. Good people of all walks of life who put aside their differences in defense of liberty is what is needed in this late hour of despotism. The thriving plutocracy must be dismantled piece by piece.

Consider working together with fellow patriots and starting your own Culper Ring in order to thwart the plans of those who seek the destruction of the Republic. Strategic pressure applied in the right spot guarantees results.

Stay off the internet, stay away from phones and recording devices, and work only with people you know you can trust when working in such a group. Do things the old-fashioned way and you will be light-years ahead of those who are handicapped by technology.

Stay within the boundaries that you are comfortable with and avoid drawing the attention of the long arm of tyranny. Stay one step ahead and stay alive.

Your Servant,

Thaddeus Burr

FINAL THOUGHTS

---

“Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom, must, like men, undergo the fatigues of supporting it.”

Thomas Paine

Thomas Paine is our Patron Saint here at The Pamphlet. We strive today to carry on with the tradition that he started in the early years of our nation. His words of yesterday ring true even today.

I hope that we can all understand by now that liberty requires action. For far too long we have punched the clock at our jobs and worked day in and day out while taking minuscule vacations here and there to reconnect with our family. Our lives waste away year by year and our corrupt government seizes more power day by day while we continue in our oblivious fashion.

I believe that the events over the past few years, and past few months especially, have taught us that the punch bowl from which we have been drinking is empty. Our government cannot be trusted with the reins of power. They have shown quite frequently that they are no better than the parliament and monarchy of England in the 1700's.

Doing nothing is no longer an option. We must start in our own back yards and in our own local government. It is time to insist on accountability and representation from our local city, county, and state officials. Call them up. Ask them what they are doing to promote liberty and freedom. And if they do not have a good answer tell them you expect a good answer next week when you call them again or you expect a resignation. Then keep calling them once a week. Hold their feet to the fire. Never give up, never surrender your liberty.

PERSEVERANCE
Creator of The Culper Ring

Benjamin Tallmadge

Benjamin Tallmadge created an organization out of patriots like you and me who were tired of tyranny. They were willing to operate in the shadows to achieve victory over the British. I often wonder if we have people who are even capable of duplicating his efforts today against the corrupt titans that are starting to control every aspect of our lives. Instant gratification seems to be the lifestyle of many people now days.

I believe if more people created similar organizations today to achieve the greater good, we would be in a better place. Reporting on those that have nefarious intent is something that we severely lack today.

PERSEVERANCE

Pamphlets that were widely distributed during the founding of our Republic and were instrumental in securing our inalienable rights from the tyrannical rule of the day. The most popular, “Common Sense” written by Thomas Paine in 1775-1776 is still well worth a read.

Through these pamphlets, the soul of our new nation and the will to defend of our unalienable rights, was born. Our Divine Creator inspired the great men of that day to ensure nothing takes away those freedoms. They enshrined them in our founding documents.

Nowadays oppressive and corrupt politicians, judges, and bureaucrats have teamed up with diabolical corporations and media outlets to subjugate the population. They openly support Violent Anarchists, Black Supremacists, and Socialist Terrorist organizations. They openly declare that their goal is the destruction of churches, cultural institutions, private businesses, and ultimately The United States of America. They have no qualms committing treason by fixing elections.

That same tyranny we the people overthrew two hundred and forty-four years ago is rampant again. The Pamphlet has been resuscitated from the dust to spread the word. We are rallying true patriots and freedom loving people everywhere to take up the banner of liberty. We are common people just like you and our Tree of Liberty has been planted.

This land is our land. We will not go quietly into the night and fade away. We are here to stay. Live free or die.
